From the Cincinnati Commercial. The Song of Lightning.

BY G. W. CUTTER. "Could I embody and anhosom new, That which is most within me-could I wreak My thoughts upon expression, and thus throw Sout, heart, mind, passions, feelings, strong or weak, All that I would have sought, and all I seek, Bear, know, feel and yet breathe-into one word,

And that one word were LIGHTSING, I would speak." Away, away through the sightless air-Stretch forth your iron thread, For I would not dim my sandals fair,

With the dust ye tamely tread;

Ay, rear it upon its million piers-

Let it reach the world around, And the journey ye make in a hundred years, I'll clear at a single bound. Tho' I cannot toil like the groaning slave

Ye hath fettered with iron skill, To ferry you over the boundless wave, Or grind in the noisy mill, Let him sing in his giant strength and speed Why, a single shall of mine Would give that monster a flight indeed,

To the death of the ocean brine. No! no! I am the spirit of light and love, To unseen hand 't is given, To pencil the ambient clouds above, And polish the stars of heaven. I scatter the golden rays of fire

On the horizon far below,-And deck the sky where storms expire, With a red and dazzling glow. The deepest recesses of earth are mine-I traverse its silent core;

Around me the starry diamonds shine, And the sparkling fields of ore. And oft I leap from my throne on high, To the depths of the ocean's caves, Where the fadeless forests of coral lie, Far under the world of waves. My being is like a lovely thought

That dwells in a sinless breast;

A tone of music that ne'er was caught-A word that was ne'er expressed. I dwell in the bright and burnished halls, Where the fountains of sun-light play— Where the curtain of gold and opal falls O'er the scenes of the dying day.

With a glance I cleave the sky in twain,

I light it with a glare,

When fall the boding drops of rain Through the darkly curtained air. The rock-built towers, the turrets grey, The piles of a thousand years, Have not the strength of potters clay Before my glittering spears.

From the Alp's or the Andes' highest crag, From the peaks of the eternal snow, The dazzling folds of my fiery flag Gleam over the world below.

In affright from my flash and blasting power, The avalanche bounds away ; And the howling storms at midnight hour, Proclaim my kingly sway.

The hieroglyphics on the persian wall-The letters of high command, Where the prophet read the tyrant's fall, Were traced with my burning hand; And oft in fire have I wrote since then,

But the sealed eyes of sinful men Were all too blind to read. At last the hour of light is here, And kings no more shall blind, Nor the bigots crush with craven fear,

What angry heaven decreed-

The forward march of mind. The words of truth, and freedom's rays, Are from my pinions hurled, And soon the sun of better days

Shall rise upon the world. But away, away, through the sightless air-Stretch forth your iron thread-

For I would not soil my sandals fair, With the dust ve tamely trend; Ay, rear it upon its million piers-Let it circle the world around,

And the journey ye make in a hundred years, I'll clear at a single bound.

For the sale of Richardson & Taylor's Ploughs. 600 PLOUGHS. The subscribers are now manufacturing the most splendid lot of Ploughs, right and left banded, of the Peacock, Sloop, Diamond and Witherow Patterns, ever reveral years in this business, they consider it almost needless to say anything more than merely to let the people know that they have them on hand and for sale. They are making a large lot of the Diamond, which in loose soil or stubble take the lead of any plough now in use. The Witherow, in sod or hard ground, cannot be beat. The Peacock and Sloop are too well known to need any praise, therefore they will only add, that their Ploughs are laid with the best of German steel. The timber was selected with great care, and is well seasoned; and they warrant them in all cases to be good, and to perform well. They therefore invite Farmers to give them a trial. For sale at E.
